Opportunities in Fixed-Income

With interest rates near all-time lows, Guggenheim believes that the best opportunity in the credit markets can be found in credit sensitive securities and moving assets away from U.S. Treasury securities. Unlike U.S. Treasury bonds, certain credit sensitive securities can potentially help investors increase their income while also reducing their exposure to interest rate increases.

To provide exposure to these credit sensitive securities, Guggenheim created the Diversified Credit Portfolio of ETFs. The chart below highlights a few of the current opportunities Guggenheim sees in credit sensitive asset classes.

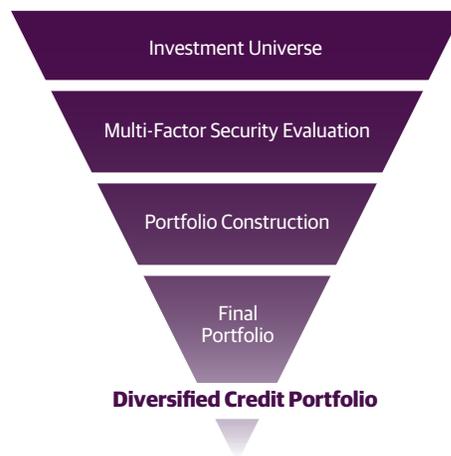

There is no guarantee that the trends and projections noted above will continue or come to fruition and they are subject to change. - Multi-Factor Security Evaluation: Select for inclusion based on the following factors but not limited to: size, liquidity and daily trading volume, current dividend yield, strategy, investment objective, securities held, expense ratio and overlap.
- Portfolio Construction: The portfolio is professionally evaluated and selected based on Guggenheim's credit outlook.
- Final Portfolio: Consists of fixed-income and preferred ETFs that have the greatest likelihood to provide current income.

For unit prices other than $10, percentages of C&D fees, and DSCs will vary but in no event will the maximum sales charge (S/C) exceed the total S/C. Early redemption of units will still cause payment of the DSC. However, an initial sales charge, which is equal to the difference between the maximum S/C and the sum of any remaining deferred S/C charges and C&D, will be charged if the price paid for units exceeds $10 per unit.

¹⁰ For unit prices other than $10, percentage of the C&D fee will vary.

emerging markets in the following regions: Americas, Europe, Middle East, Africa, and Asia. Original issue zeroes, step-up coupon structures, 144-As and pay-in-kind bonds (PIKs, as of October 1, 2009) are also included.

RISK CONSIDERATIONS: As with all investments, you may lose some or all of your investment in the Trust. No assurance can be given that the Trust's investment objective will be achieved. The Trust also might not perform as well as you expect. This can happen for reasons such as these: • Securities prices can be volatile. • Share prices or distributions on the securities in the Trust may decline during the life of the Trust. • The Trust invests in shares of ETFs, which are subject to various risks, including management's ability to meet the fund's investment objective. Shares of ETFs may trade at a discount from their net asset value in the secondary market. This risk is separate and distinct from the risk that the net asset value of the ETF shares may decrease. You will bear not only your share of your trust's expenses, but also the expenses of the underlying ETFs. By investing in ETFs, the Trust incurs greater expenses than you would incur if you invested directly in the ETFs. • The ETFs are subject to annual fees and expenses, including a management fee. Unitholders of the Trust will bear these fees in addition to the fees and expenses of the Trust. • The Trust is subject to an ETF's index correlation risk. • The value of the fixed-income securities ETFs will generally fall if interest rates, in general, rise. The Trust may be subject to greater risk of rising interest rates than would normally be the case due to the current period of historically low rates. • An ETF or an issuer of securities held by an ETF may be unwilling or unable to make principal payments and/or to declare distributions in the future, may call a security before its stated maturity, or may reduce the level of distributions declared. Issuers may suspend dividends during the life of the Trust. This may result in a reduction in the value of your units. • The financial condition of an ETF or an issuer of securities held by an ETF may worsen, resulting in a reduction in the value of your units. This may occur at any point in time, including during the primary offering period. As the Trust is unmanaged, a downgraded security will remain in the portfolio. • Economic conditions may lead to limited liquidity and greater volatility. • Certain ETFs held by the Trust invest in municipal bonds, which are long-term fixed rate debt obligations that decline in value with increases in interest rates, an issuer's worsening financial condition, a drop in bond ratings or when there is a decrease in the federal income tax rate. Municipal bonds generally generate income exempt from federal income taxation, but may be subject to the alternative minimum tax. In addition, some or all of the income generated by an ETF may not be exempt from regular federal or state income taxes and as a result, the related income paid by the Trust may also be subject to regular federal and state income taxes. Capital gains, if any, may be subject to tax. • Certain ETFs held by the Trust invest in securities that are structured as floating-rate instruments. The yield on these securities will generally decline in a falling interest rate environment, causing the ETFs to experience a reduction in the income they receive from these securities. A sudden and significant increase in market interest rates may increase the risk of payment defaults and cause a decline in the value of these investments and the value of the ETFs held by the Trust. • Certain ETFs held by the Trust invest in mortgage-backed securities. Rising interest rates tend to extend the duration of mortgage-backed securities, making them more sensitive to changes in interest rates, and may reduce the market value of the securities. Mortgage-backed securities are subject to prepayment risk, the risk that borrowers may pay off their mortgages sooner than expected, particularly when interest rates decline. This can reduce the ETFs', and therefore the Trust's, returns because the ETFs may have to reinvest that money at lower prevailing interest rates. • Certain ETFs held by the Trust invest in securities that are rated below investment-grade and are considered to be "junk" securities, speculative and are subject to greater market and credit risks; the risk of non-payment or default is higher than with investment-grade securities. Such securities may be more sensitive to interest rate changes and more likely to receive early returns of principal in falling rate environments. • Certain ETFs held by the Trust may invest in securities that are rated as investment-grade by only one rating agency; such split-rated securities may have more speculative characteristics and are subject to a greater risk of default than securities rated as investment-grade by more than one rating agency. • Certain ETFs held by the Trust invest in foreign securities, which presents additional risk. Foreign risk is the risk that foreign securities will be more volatile than U.S. securities due to such factors as adverse economic, currency, political, social or regulatory developments in a country. • Certain ETFs held by the Trust invest in securities issued by companies headquartered or incorporated in countries considered to be emerging markets, which may be exposed to greater volatility and market risk, including the possibility of investment and trading limitations, liquidity concerns, delays and disruptions in settlement transactions, political uncertainties and dependence on international trade and development assistance. • Inflation may lead to a decrease in the value of assets or income from investments. Please see the Trust prospectus for more complete risk information.
